Reporting Ethical Violations

Your conduct can reinforce an ethical atmosphere and positively influence the conduct of fellow associates. If you are powerless to stop suspected misconduct or discover it after it has occurred, you must report it to the appropriate level of management at your location. If you are still concerned after speaking with your local management or feel uncomfortable speaking with them (for whatever reason), you must (anonymously, if you wish) call the MBS Ethics Hotline at (079)66099999, or send a detailed note, with relevant documents, to Modern Business Solutions Ground Floor, Raja Complex, Nr Vijay Cross Roads, Navrangpura, Ahmedabad-380 009, or sending an email to info@mbsindia.net
Your calls, detailed notes and/or emails will be dealt with confidentially. You have the commitment of MBS and of the Audit Committee of MBS's Board of Directors that you will be protected from retaliation.

Conclusion

In the final analysis you are the guardian of MBS's ethics. While there are no universal rules, when in doubt ask yourself:

· Will my actions be ethical in every respect and fully comply with the law and with MBS policies?

· Will my actions have the appearance of impropriety?

· Will my actions be questioned by my supervisors, associates, clients, family, and the general public?

· Am I trying to fool anyone, including myself, as to the propriety of my actions?

If you are uncomfortable with your answer to any of the above, you should not take the contemplated actions without first discussing them with your local management. If you are still uncomfortable, please follow the steps outlined above in the section on "Reporting Ethical Violations."

Any associate/employee who ignores or violates any of MBS's ethical standards, and any manager who penalizes a subordinate for trying to follow these ethical standards, will be subject to corrective action, including immediate dismissal. Please refer to MBS's Corrective Action Policy. However, it is not the threat of discipline that should govern your actions. We hope you share our belief that a dedicated commitment to ethical behavior is the right thing to do, is good business, and is the surest way for MBS to become and remain a World Class Service company.
